AIRSTRIKE

PCP AIR RIFLE

“ Dear Friends -
As we enter the holiday season, I hope you find yourself surrounded by peace, joy, and the people you want to be surrounded by.

This time of year always reminds me to slow down, reflect, and enjoy the simple things—whether that’s a walk outdoors, a fun plinking session in the garage or if you are in a southern state, then in the backyard.

This September we held our 9th Pyramyd AIR Cup, with record attendance by competitors and spectators. Thank you for making it a huge success. We depend on you.

The world can feel uncertain at times, and yes—even prices seem to have a mind of their own these days. You may notice differences between our catalog, website, or when you call in. Please know that we’re doing everything possible here at Pyramyd AIR to hold off on increases and keep your passion for the outdoors affordable.

What never changes, though, is the joy that comes from stepping outside, taking a deep breath of fresh air, and sharing this hobby we all love.

From all of us at Pyramyd AIR, thank you for being part of our community. We’re grateful for your trust and loyalty. May your holidays be safe, healthy, and filled with moments of adventure—big or small.

THE HOLIDAYS ARE COMING

By Tom Gaylord

Here come the holidays and what can you get for your airgunner? Well, there has never been a better time than 2025 to shop for airguns, so let's see.

Pre-charged Pneumatics (PCPs)

The Umarex Komplete is an extremely flexible pneumatic air rifle.

If your guy or gal likes pneumatics, first find out whether it's precharged pneumatics (PCP) or multi pumps. The world of PCPs has never been better, and I have two outstanding recommendations. The first is the .177 or .22-caliber Umarex Komplete. It's a gun that uses nitrogen cylinders (called NitroAir) and large (88-91-gram) CO2 cylinders for power and there's even an optional Air Venturi conversion air tank that holds high-pressure air. The Komplete uses any of these for its power. It's the Swiss Army knife of pneumatic rifles! It comes complete except for sights! Better ask your airgunner what they want for a sight, because shooters are usually quite particular about scopes and dot sights.

Another great air rifle is the Umarex Notos. This one comes in .22 caliber only and has been a standout favorite of airgunners for several years. It's small, lightweight and very accurate. And there are scads of aftermarket accessories for this gem. Many of them are 3D printed, so the cost is as reasonable as the Notos itself.

The Umarex Notos is the industry leader in affordable PCPs!

But perhaps you want to give an even greater gift to your special person. Pyramyd AIR has you covered there, too. I'll start with the FX Crown MKII Base w/ Saber Tactical Chassis. It's one of the most customizable rifles on the market, so it can grow with the shooter. In this case you really need to know the caliber your shooter wants because this one also comes in .25 caliber. It's the kind of air rifle that can be used in a long-range benchrest air rifle match.

FX Crown PCP

Multi-pump Pneumatics

Multi-pump pneumatics don't need to be filled from compressors or air tanks. The shooter is the one who fills them. Some shooters prefer this and for them Pyramyd AIR has created the best of the best—the Seneca Dragonfly Mark II. When I reviewed this in my blog, I discovered it is extremely accurate, very powerful and, best of all, is super-easy to pump! While other multi-pumps are harder to pump as the power increases, this novel system keeps all the pump strokes light and easy!

The Seneca Dragonfly Mark II is the culmination of many years of development. It's a leading multi-pump!

A patented "butterfly" pump linkage gives the shooter extra muscle exactly when it's needed. It also has adjustable open sights and a threaded muzzle for an add-on silencer or air stripper. Even the trigger is nice! It comes in either .177 or .22 calibers, so ask the shooter which is preferred.

The last multi pump I'll recommend is the Crosman 362. It comes in .22 caliber only and has everything needed to shoot right away except pellets. It's a rifle that's evolved since the 1950s and today is as advanced as it will get for many years. The open sights are adjustable, but be aware that this one does not accept a scope or dot sight. This rifle is hard to get because the demand is so high, so order early if you want it for Christmas.

Spring-Piston

The final recommendation I'll give is for an Air Arms TX200 Mark 3 rifle. This one is the Rolls Royce of spring-piston air rifles, and everyone knows it. Your shooter will be super pleased when he or she sees the gorgeous rifle lying in the box. And the great thing is—this one shoots as good as it looks! I have owned several of these over three decades and the Mark 3 is the high-water mark for Air Arms. It comes in both .177 and .22 but my preference is for the .177. You can take it out of the box, put a scope on and compete in field target right away! And if you want to go all-out, get one with a walnut stock. Or even a laminate, depending on your shooter's preference. One thing to keep in mind though—the TX200 is a heavy rifle and if that's not for your shooter, stay with PCPs.

The TX200 Mark 3 is the Rolls Royce of spring-piston airguns.

This catalog has to conserve space, so I have another gift idea for you that I will put in a separate article. Read about the RovAir Portable air compressor.

ROVAIR PORTABLE AIR COMPRESSOR

By Tom Gaylord

If there is one thing airgunners need after guns and pellets, it's air. I guess that's obvious from the name of the hobby, but it does present a challenge

And please understand I am only talking about precharged pneumatics (PCP) now. The other airgun powerplants have different ways of propelling their pellets but since the PCP is the fastest-growing segment of airguns, obtaining high-pressure air is a hot topic!

There are several ways for get high-pressure air, but this area of airguns is growing so fast that the topic of air compressors needs to be discussed. For example, as new airguns hit the market their fill pressures are mostly increasing. Today's PSI is probably more like 3650 psi. High pressure hand pumps are great up to 2000 psi and there are still a few airguns on the market that fill to that level, but the majority of new airguns need higher-pressure air. Hand pumps can go higher when they have to but pumping them becomes a strain.

Another way airgunners get their air is from a scuba dive shop or from an emergency service like the fire department. The dive shop air costs money for each fill and sometimes you have to leave your air tank with them because they are filling another large order, or some part of their high-pressure air system is down. Fire departments don't have to fill your tank if they don't want to. If you can use them a fire department is a wonderful way to fill tanks.

Enter the personal air compressor. When I started this game the only air compressors that existed that put out high-pressure air suitable for airguns were the ones made to fill scuba tanks and rescue tanks. They started at more than three thousand dollars so very few airgunners were able to afford them. A little more than a decade ago the compressor world changed. Compressors that sold for just under two thousand dollars hit the market and started to change things. The quality and features kept climbing and the cost kept declining. I can remember a time a decade ago when I said what the world needed was a good $500 compressor. And then a few years ago we started to get them.

ROVAIR by Air Venturi

The RovAir Portable air compressor is one of many small compressors that are made to fill single airguns, rather than entire tanks. There are many very good ones on the market today and the RovAir is one of them. Its original price was $500. That has climbed by $50 this year, but it's still an incredible value. The compressor is small, quiet, lightweight (for an air compressor) and runs on either 110V household current or 12V auto battery power. I do recommend getting a high-end aftermarket water separator for every compressor you operate. The airgun world has changed, now that affordable air compressors like the RovAir are available.

INTRODUCING ARCHERY PRO SHOP

Scan
Me!

Skip the hassle of a local bow shop.
They said it could not be done, but we did!

Our patented (U.S. Patent No. 12,405,080) process needs just 3 simple measurements and we can customize your bow to exactly what you need, and have it shipped to you without leaving your house.

HOW IT WORKS

Choose Your Bow*: Discover the perfect blend of technology and tradition with our extensive selection of compound bows.

SEND US YOUR SPECS

Enter your preferences such as draw weight, and measurements such as eye height.

WE SET IT UP

Accessories installed, cams timed, peep set and more by our certified master technicians.

WE SHIP IT

Your new bow will arrive tuned and tested. All you need to do is sight in and you're ready to shoot!

WHAT I WOULD LIKE TO SEE IN 2026

By Tom Gaylord

What would Tom Gaylord like to see in the world of airguns in 2026? Well, that's not going to happen because it has taken all of 2025 to get things ready for next year, so I suppose I should have said what I would like to see in 2027. And what would that be?

A lower-pressure precharged pneumatic

One thing I'd like to see a precharged pneumatic (PCP) that fills to less than 3,000 psi. Two-thousand five-hundred psi would be good but lower would be even better. The lower the fill pressure the fewer leaks the airgun will have—AS LONG AS THERE ARE ONLY A FEW O-RINGS! PCPs are the hottest growth sector in the airgun world with good reason. They are accurate, lightweight and do not require any special technique to shoot well. The additional things like the artillery hold and taking time between shots to allow the plenum to fill with air are not considerations.

If a PCP was built with a lower fill pressure such as 2000 psi, then inexpensive hand pumps could fill it rather than air compressors or separate air tanks. So why isn't it being done? Well, shot count and velocity are two big reasons. But there is another subtle reason nobody seems to talk about. To build a PCP takes some sort of tube or tank for the reservoir. The most exaggerated example of this has to be the USFT rifle. It only fills to 1500-1600 psi, depending on the build and tune, and yet it shoots over 50 heavy .177 caliber pellets in the mid 900 f.p.s. range.

The USFT rifle used much lower-pressure air to launch pellets.

The problem with the USFT rifle is its air reservoir is huge! It's far too large for a sporting air rifle. But take two much thinner air tubes and stack them like the barrels of an over-under shotgun and the profile becomes much better. Cap the fill pressure at 2000 and the wall thickness of the reservoir tubes can be thinner. That means they hold even more air! Make the forearm super slender and the rifle takes on a wonderful shape! This is an air rifle that will sell—especially if the shot count can be around 30 with the 10-grain .177-caliber pellet goes out at 950 f.p.s. or so. There is SO much more I could add to such an air rifle—like a balanced valve instead of a regulator (cheaper to build and more reliable), a wonderful (Marauder or RAW-like) trigger and more. This would be an ultra-reliable PCP like one made by AirForce instead of a guaranteed leaker that's nothing but problems.

That's my idea for a new airgun that I believe would break open the stalled market and get sales rolling again. This would offer great value at a reasonable cost. But will they happen? We shall see.

MICROSTRIKE PCP Air Pistol

Versatility abounds with the Air Venturi MicroStrike PCP Air Pistol.

This compact, easy-to-shoot platform can be used as a pistol or carbine with a six-position foldable stock. It is more than capable of hunting small game and pests or spending hours on the range honing skills.

Available in three popular calibers, .177, .22, or .25 with the ability to change barrels.
